As social workers, nurses, counselors, case managers and other helping professionals – we work with many different patients and clients. LGBT clients often face unique challenges and as helping professionals – we have an ethical responsibility to understand these challenges and to respond to the unique needs of our clients/patients. This innovative training will explore some of the unique challenges of the LGBT population – looking closely at LGBT elders and also teens/adolescents. We will begin our day of learning with a brief overview as well as ethical standards and principles that we will apply throughout our day. From there, we will watch the first portion of a documentary film, GenSilent. Gen Silent is the critically acclaimed documentary from filmmaker Stu Maddux that asks six LGBT seniors if they will hide their friends, their spouses- their entire lives in order to survive in the healthcare system. This film follows the LGBT seniors to give audiences all over the country a look into the challenges faced by this community. Following this, Ms. Linda Ellis will review some best practices and ethical considerations when working with the LGBT population – first focusing on seniors and then also providing information for those working with LGBT teens/adolescents. After watching the 2nd part of GenSilent – we will break off for round-table discussions in small groups. Finally, we will end our day of learning with an expert panel who will continue to review best practices and ethical considerations around working with the LGBT population.
