In the healthcare field, difficult conversations come with the job. Helping professionals support patients and families as they navigate complex decisions in stressful and emotionally heightened times. Social workers, nurses, case managers, counselors, and allied providers are not immune to the heavy feelings that arise when talking with patients and families about sensitive health information. What tools do we have in our toolbox as professionals? What tools are available to us through our interprofessional colleagues and the systems in which we practice? How are we at risk of vicarious trauma and secondary traumatic stress? Join us for an inspiring educational experience, where expert hospice and palliative care nurse, Jenny Buckley RN, BSN, will guide us through a full day of thoughtful conversations on the ethical considerations surrounding communicating with patients, families, and loved ones by outlining communication techniques and the art of having difficult conversations with patients and families. Including conversations with the real-Life McDreamy and McSteamy, we will review clips from the riveting Netflix documentary series “Lenox Hill” - where viewers get a front-row seat to the inner workings of a New York City hospital as cameras follow several physicians across multiple departments. David Langer, MD and John Boockvar, MD from the series will join us in a pre-recorded conversation to discuss supporting our interprofessional colleagues in facilitating difficult conversations with patients and families.

SPEAKER BIOS

Jenny Buckley, RN, BSN, CHPN, Founder Jenny Buckley Care Matters

Jenny Buckley Care Matters is the business that I have been dreaming of starting for years. It provides a service that was born out of the realization that I could make a difference in the way that individuals and families experience illness and medical treatment. I intend to use my extensive experience and knowledge, gained from working in community based palliative care for over twenty years, to fill a void that currently exists in our healthcare system. That void becomes painfully evident when patients and families are left to face the consequence of their illness and its treatment and can create a very real and massive sense of helplessness. I am perfectly positioned to lend my unique skill set to bring relief to families in this very difficult space.

John Boockvar, MD, is the Vice Chair of the Department of Neurosurgery at Lenox Hill Hospital and Director of the Brain Tumor Center, and the Pituitary/Neuroendocrine Center of the Department of Neurosurgery and the New York Head and Neck Institute at Lenox Hill and Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospitals. Dr. Boockvar is a Professor of Neurological Surgery and Otolaryngology/Head and Neck Surgery at the Zucker School of Medicine's Special Initiatives Unit, GA Department of Human Services, Division of Aging Services.

Dr. Boockvar is internationally known for his surgical expertise and for providing patients with safe, effective, and minimally invasive treatment for brain tumors, skull base disorders, and disorders of the spine. Dr. Boockvar's surgical expertise is in benign and malignant brain tumors, skull base and endoscopic pituitary surgery, spinal and peripheral nerve tumors, minimally invasive spinal surgery, and complex spinal disorders. Dr. Boockvar has been recognized for his novel research in brain tumors and stem cell biology.

David Langer, MD is the chair of neurosurgery at Lenox Hill Hospital and Vice President of neurosurgery for Northwell Health's Western Region. He is Professor of Neurosurgery and Radiology at the Donald and Barbara Zucker School of Medicine at Hofstra/Northwell. Nationally and Internationally recognized as a leading neurosurgeon and expert in cerebral revascularization and cerebral aneurysms, his work focuses on diseases of the brain vessels. Dr. Langer's work has been featured in numerous peer-reviewed publications and he has spoken nationally and internationally on vascular disorders such as aneurysms and arteriovenous malformations (AVMs) of the brain. He is one of the few cerebral bypass surgeons in the country.

He is currently a peer reviewer for the journals Neurosurgery and American Association of Neurological Surgeons' Neurosurgeon. In 2015, Dr. Langer received North Shore-LIJ Health System's President's Award. In 2018, Dr. Langer received The Sally Harrington Goldwater Memorial Visiting Professor Award from the Barrow Neurological Foundation.
